The author of the project was Adolf Loos, who collaborated with the architect Karel Lhota on the project. Outwardly, the building appears austere functionalist; it is its interior layout that is of particular interest (so called Rauplan - Loos invention - each room is situated at different height levels, which are interconnected by stairs). Until 1948 the villa served as a residential house ...

VILLA MULLER
The Villa Muller is famous for it ' s demonstration of Adolf Loos ' Rauplan, or three dimensional plan approach to designing and conceiving of a building. The elements studied therefore centered around the expression of the Rauplan through the creation of uniquely readable facade through fenestration placement, as well as investigating the circulation through the building with it ' s ...

Loos's Rauplan reached its apotheosis in his last domestic works, Møller House and Villa Muller of 1928 and 1930. As anticipated in the open stair hall of the Rufer House, both these works are organized about displacements in the respective levels of their principal floors, elisions that serve not only to create spatial movement but also to differentiate one living area from the next.
